The collection and use of personal data. If so ordered by the relevant authorities, we may disclose items of this data (data already in our possession) on a case by case basis in so far as is necessary for the purpose of criminal prosecution, the avoidance of danger, to enable the Federal Office for the Protection of the Constitution or the Military Counter-Intelligence Service to perform their statutory duties or for the purpose of the assertion of intellectual property rights.

We collect and use your personal data in so far as is necessary to enable you to use our web-services (usage data). This data particularly includes information on the beginning, end and extent of the use of our services.

For the purposes of promotion, market research and designing our web-services to suit demand, we are allowed to create usage profiles using pseudonyms. You have the right to object to this use of your data at any time. We will not, and indeed are not allowed to link this usage profile with data about the person behind the pseudonym.

Transmission of personal data to third parties.

No personal data is passed to third parties if you have not registered with us. In the event that you register for the use of our service, please note the explicit statement of consent which also includes consent for the onward transmission of data.

Objection to the commercial use of our contact data

The use of our contact data published in our Legal Notices section or in comparable statements, such as postal addresses, phone and fax numbers as well as email addresses, by third parties for the transmission of information which has not been expressly requested is not permitted unless we have previously given our express written consent or unless a business relationship already exists. Cookies & other technical measures

What are called "temporary cookies" are used to make navigation easier when individual sites are accessed. The cookies in our web-site do not collect any personal data about you and are completely anonymous. Cookies do not harm your computer and do not contain any viruses. You can prevent the installation of cookies by setting your browser software appropriately. However, we wish to point out that in this case you may not be able to use all the functions of this web-site to their full extent.

Technical measures, for example Java Applets or Active-X-Controls, which enable the user's access pattern to be reproduced are not used.

Google Analytics

This website uses Google Analytics, a web analysis service of Google Inc. ("Google"). Google Analytics uses cookies i.e. text files which are saved in your computer and which enable the use of the web-site to be analysed. The information generated about your use of this web-site (including your IP address) is transferred to a Google server in the USA where it is saved. Google will use this information to evaluate your use of the web-site in order to compile reports on web-site activity for the web-site operator and to perform additional services associated with the use of the web-site and the Internet. If necessary, Google may also relay this information to third parties in so far as this is allowed by law or to the extent that third parties process this information on behalf of Google. In no case will Google link your IP address with other data which Google saves. You can prevent the installation of cookies by setting your browser software appropriately. However, we wish to point out that in this case you may not be able to use all the functions of this web-site to their full extent.

We have also set up Google Analytics in such a way that the complete IP address is not saved or processed; the last byte of the visitor's IP address is automatically removed by Google Analytics before the IP address is used and saved.

The Google Analytics function can now be deactivated in all commonly used browsers by means of a browser add-on. Thus, if you wish, you can you can very easily prevent analysis information from being sent to Google merely by installing this browser add-on. This possibility now exists for Google Chrome, Firefox, Internet Explorer, Safari and Opera.
